NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Rare Assortment of Swords in National Museum

WASHINGTON.—The sword collection in the National museum, comprising some 180 pieces, proves perhaps of greater general interest than any other of the many extensive exhibits. It not only covers a long period of history but shows the development of the sword as a weapon and as a badge of rank and office.

One good-sized collection, turned over to the museum by the war department some years ago, is representative of all branches of the war service for the different periods in United States history, and includes also several foreign naval and military types. By comparison, it is seen that the types changed all over the world every ten or twenty years, a feature no doubt resulting from the contact brought about by wars as well as following peace regulations.

In the ethnological division of the new building there is an instructive exhibit of swords and cutlery which forms part of the George Kennan collection, and includes Turkish and Arabian yataghans, two Russian swords, a Scotch dirk, a Crusader's sword, and a sample of two-handed weapon dated 1710. In the Mason family collection, lent to the museum by Mrs. Julian James, there are several American swords, bayonets and cutlasses, besides many implements from Japan, China, Turkey and North Africa.

Two other notable collections are the deposits of the late Dr. Charles W. Hickman of Augusta, Ga., and Capt. J. R. Hannay, U. S. A., which include 70 weapons of exceptional rarity. Other collections pertain to the native weapons of the Philippines, Cuba and Porto Rico.

Among the individual exhibits are numerous swords connected with important epochs in American history. The earliest types are those of the Revolution, particularly those which were presented by the Continental congress to John Hancock and Col. Return Jonathan Meigs; a service sword of Gen. Peter Gansevoort, Jr., and another engraved "The Sword of Rochambeau," a cutlass from the Bonhomme Richard, presented to Lieut. James B. Safford in 1784, and several swords of the period, the ownership of which is not established.

In connection with later wars there are swords which belonged to Decatur, Shilbirk, Ripley, Gansevoort, Brown, McGraw, Morgan, Shields, Paul de Peysson, Vincent, Howard, Hancock, Custer, Grant, Sherman, Kilpatrick, Trenchard, Mason, Wilkes, Schley, Phillips, Capron and Ord.

Do Senators and Congressmen Like Applause?

SOME was recently posted up in the halls of congress a card that had evidently been used in a moving picture show. Visitors were astounded to read on going into the galleries a notice marked "Information: Please applaud any act that you like, as this not only stimulates the performer, but gives the management an idea of the particular kind of vaudeville you most enjoy. Please report any discourtesy on the part of employees to manager and their services will be promptly dispensed with."

There was a good deal of tittering before an attendant spied the card and hastily removed it. A senator who heard of the joke declared that it was a pity to spoil the fun, for the card was only an indication of the frank way Americans have of expressing themselves. A great many believe that the progress of culture means the repression of suggestions that under ordinary circumstances would be frankly made. "The actors on the stage seek applause," continued the senator, "why then not frankly admit that they like it, and ask the audience to stir themselves now and then? There is never a time in debate when a congressman or senator who is speaking is not consciously pleased when the galleries applaud or burst into laughter despite the rap of the gavel and the admonition of the speaker, 'If the noise does not cease, the galleries will be cleared.'" Of course, playing to the galleries in congress is expressly prohibited, but who would dare to say that it is not practised assiduously by a large proportion of the men in public life, for, in the last analysis, who are the gallery but the people—and who are the people?

Youth Dips Into Fountain on a Two-Dollar Bet

A MEMBER of the Western High school housed at the Franklin school is endeavoring to collect a wager from his schoolmates, won at noon recess the other day. The youngster, said to be the son of a prominent Washington banker, is not only trying to collect the wager, but is endeavoring to elude the watchful eye of the park policeman. It all happened in this way. Gathered around the stands in course of erection for the Barry memorial statue ceremony, several boys were eating lunch.

"For two hits," said one boy, "I'd dive into the fountain."

"You're on," cried half a dozen voices.

"Bet you two beans you won't."

"Nothing to it," returned the youth challenged.

Stepping upon the concrete rim of the fountain, the youth stood poised for a second, and with a graceful Annette Kellerman dive performed the "Australasian epiphany" into the water.

Whoops and shouts attracted attention as the youth emerged in the center of the pool and made his way to the edge. In less than a second's time the youngster made his way across the park, scared, soaked wet, but entirely successful in accomplishing the stunt.

Just how he managed to explain his condition or successfully elude detection is not known, but a frightened youngster is today trying to collect his bet and avoid the publicity which usually accompanies such stunts.

Girls in Printing Bureau Must All Be Healthy

HORSE power! That's what they have to have—those girls who work as printers' assistants. And horse power is what we would make a requirement of their appointment. It's no use putting a race-horse to draw a truck.

"It's hard work to be a printer's assistant; a severe physical stress is upon the workers. If they are not healthy and strong—well, the work is too much for them."

Director Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing made this explanation of his point of view in explaining the investigation undertaken by Dr. Benjamin S. Warren of the public health service. A physical examination, rigid enough to determine the fitness of applicants for the labor required of them as printers' assistants, it is expected, will be directed as part of the civil service requirements. It is hewn, not brains, that the labor demands.

There are 500 printers' assistants employed in the bureau. Most of them are physically capable, and the investigation is not especially aimed at present conditions, but to insure that future appointments shall be of the right metal in the matter of strength and endurance. The girls are on their feet throughout the hours of the work day, and the strain is severe when there is not bodily fitness.

Examinations of the lungs, to determine the freedom from tubercular tendencies, and of the body generally to prove normal development, is the idea of what should be the test of fitness. A tubercular employee is regarded as a menace to her fellow workers, and one of inferior strength as putting an unfair burden upon her fellow workers to keep up the average production of labor, as well as a detriment to the public service.

Well, It Was Strong.

Little Geraldine, aged five, had finished her dinner, which included horse radish, the first she had ever tasted. She listened to the comments of her elders as to how delicious it was, but how strong. When her father left the table she followed him to the door and said sadly, "Papa, did you have to kill a horse to get it?"

WILL REQUIRE A BILLION DOLLARS TO CLEAN MEXICO

Methods to Prevent Pestilences
Hopelessly Out of Date.

WORK FOR THE MEDICAL MEN

Sanitation and Not Running Down of Banditti Will Be Task for U. S.
If It Intervenes and Occupies
Distracted Country.

Washington.—"It will cost a billion dollars to clean up Mexico," said a noted sanitary expert here. He referred to the medieval condition of the Mexican cities regarding measures for the prevention of pestilences. This work of sanitation and not the running down of banditti is the great task the United States will undertake if it intervenes in Mexico and occupies that distracted country.

But just now the medical men here are not directly concerned with the problem of rendering all Mexico a country of healthy, modern cities. They are bending every effort to assure the freedom from sickness of the thousands of boys in khaki already in the tierras calientes, or hot coast lands, and the tens of thousands who may soon land there.

Nothing could illustrate better the necessity of proper medical staffs in the field than recent reports of conditions in the Mexican federal army. The Mexican army has no medical corps that deserves the name. After a recent battle with the rebels the wounded who could not stand were piled in a heap and left to die. Those who could stand were crowded on a train bound for Mexico City. Their wounds were untreated and putrefaction set in. The poor wretches had not even water. Those complaining of their condition were taken to the doors of the coaches by the guards aboard the train and thrown off, some rolling underneath the wheels. Only the few who reached hospitals in Mexico City had a chance to survive.

The American surgeons and Red Cross workers on the field of battle, as in the fighting at Vera Cruz, treat friend and foe alike. But even here the wounded become their care, army medical men find plenty to do.

Sanitary work has really only been learned since the time of the Spanish-American war. It used to be axiomatic that disease killed more than bullets in a war. This was strikingly true of 1898.

Two years ago 13,000 American troops were encamped several months at San Antonio, Tex. There was only one case of typhoid and not a single death from that cause. In 1898, 11,000 were in camp at Jacksonville, Fla., for about the same length of time and under similar conditions. There were 8,000 cases of typhoid, and 248 poor fellows died. Nothing could better illustrate army progress in preventing disease.

The Mexicans in Vera Cruz who were familiar with conditions in their own fighting force marveled at the preparations the American troops made to war upon disease. The trim, active surgeons, the long lines of mules and wagons, the complete equipment were somewhat of a revelation. Still more did they marvel when the soldiers were put to work carting muck from the streets and straightening up in the first days of the occupation.

Each army division, which is made up of four brigades, will have four field hospitals. In each hospital are 108 beds. In the rear of the field hospitals, supposing an advance movement, will be an evacuation hospital, which will hold twice as many beds as a field hospital. Behind the evacuation hospital, fifty or one hundred miles, depending on the position, will be a base hospital.

There are five surgeons assigned to each field hospital, three to each ambulance corps, four medical officers and twenty-two members of a hospital corps to each regiment and a chief surgeon and a chief sanitary inspector to each division.

Surgeon General William C. Gorgas

$295 KISS ENDS ROMANCE

Placing That Price on Cares, New York Justice Denies Rejected
Suits' Demands.

New York.—A shattered romance had its termination in the Sixth district municipal court, Brooklyn, when Joseph A. Dunn of 409 Ashford street, lost an action against Miss Beatrice Probst of 92 St. Mark's place for $295. He places that value on the presents he gave her in his courtship of one believes that the work of preparing the army for the field has been so effectively done that there will be little danger to the soldiers' health.

If the army were mobilized to occupy the whole of Mexico it would consist of some 120,000 regulars and twice as many volunteers. The regulars, excepting the recruits, would average one to three years of experience, which has taught them how to take care of themselves in the field.

The volunteers would not be without experience either. Many would be Spanish war veterans and others would have learned the proper sanitary measures from maneuver camps.

The green men would be taught in concentration camps. Most of the officers of volunteers are impressed with the value of sanitation in the field and they and the regular officers and older soldiers can be depended upon to instruct the new men quickly in correct habits. There was no such element of experienced men in 1898.

The responsibilities of the army sanitary officer are great. It is his duty to see that there is an adequate and pure water supply. All divisions which go to the front will be equipped with the Darnell filter invented by Major Carl R. Darnell of the medical corps, who is now in the Philippine Islands. In many places in Mexico filtering will not do and water must be boiled. Besides water, the sanitary officer must see that there is proper disposal of sewage, that all waste food is promptly destroyed, that mosquito nettings are always used by everybody wherever there are any mosquitos, that stable manure—the common breeding ground of flies—is never allowed to accumulate, but is promptly burned, that clothes and bedding are exposed to the direct rays of the sun at frequent intervals, that care is taken not to permit the troops to eat unsound fruit or anything else which is liable to be infected, and generally that the rules of healthy living are observed by everybody.

With an army engaged in actual warfare, all this work has to be carried out under the excitement of the campaign and the pressure of the moment and subject to the imperative need of attending to the wounded. For this reason, these precautions against disease are scarcely effective unless there is intelligent co-operation on the part of officers and men.

Yellow fever, tropical malaria, Mexican typhus, typhoid and dysentery are the diseases most to be expected in a Mexican campaign. To combat the first named Surgeon General Gorgas already has sent down there medical officers trained under him at Panama. There they are in command of

In case of extended operations in Mexico Major General Leonard Wood would be in command. He entered the service as a medical man. "The Fighting Doctor," as he is dubbed, can be relied upon to pay special attention to sanitation.

If the United States were to take over that billion dollar sanitary campaign in Mexico, Dr. Rupert Blue, surgeon general of the United States public health and marine hospital service, would undoubtedly figure. His corps rushes to any part of the United States where a dangerous epidemic breaks out. He is the man who stamped out bubonic plague in San Francisco by dyeing rats vermilion and yellow and green and by these brilliant messengers tracing the spread of the Asiatic scourge about the city.

DAMAGED STATUES IN BERLIN

Retired French Army Officer Broke
Marble From "Sieges Allee" Monuments.

Berlin.—Serious acts of vandalism have been perpetrated in the famous "Sieges Allee" here. Four statues were badly damaged and the heads of several of the marble eagles which form the arms of the benches in the "Allee" were found to have been broken off.

A man who, at about the time of the outrage, was seen to step over the chain surrounding one of the statues was arrested in connection with the affair, and in his pockets were found a stone of considerable size and a strong knife.

The prisoner gave his name as Antoine Astier, a pensioned staff surgeon of the French marine. His age is given as forty-one.

The statues which Astier damaged were those of Frederick the Great, the Elector Joachim Friedrich, the Elector Joachim II and Margrave Heinrich II. Astier claims to possess a Raphael "La Belle Jardiniere," which he desires to sell to the city of Berlin for $1,600,000.

he permitted him to kiss her on several occasions.

"One kiss alone is worth $295. I think you received full value for your money," said Justice Rosenthal, as he marked the case "settled."

Millions Moved Under Guard.

the experienced yellow fever expert, Colonel Henry P. Birmingham. Outside of Vera Cruz yellow fever will probably not be encountered.

Typhoid need cause little fear, because of the remarkable success of the vaccination treatment. So far as malaria is concerned a field mosquitos har is provided for each man and a head net for each man when on sentry duty. Dysentery is a water-born disease.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

JUSTICE JOSEPH RUCKER LAMAR

Justice Joseph Rucker Lamar, who was recently appointed mediator at the Niagara Falls peace conference, is accepted by all who come in contact with the Supreme court, or the social life in Washington, as one of the most delightful personalities on the highest bench. President Taft found him to be the most companionable of men when he was visiting in Augusta, Lamar's home city. A story soon started, and has not yet been downed, that President Taft, who was suspected of being anxious to form a golf cabinet in Washington, matching the "Tennis Cabinet" of a former era, had known Lamar on the links in the southern city. But the justice denied it, and, by way of making his assertion believed, capped it with the remark that he had never had a golf stick in his hands in his life. It may not be legal evidence, but it is strongly circumstantial, that the justice would not have called a golf club a "stick" had he been a fellow of St. Andrew. As a matter of fact, Lamar has no recreations of this sort. He is one of those southern men who are able to keep most warmly human, without doing anything that is patently human, such as golf, or being a baseball "fan." His only recreation is companionship with others, and scholarly pursuits. Of course, he was a judge down in Georgia, as all Lamars who follow the law must be, but he was not on the bench when Taft offered him the nomination. Just then, as he says himself, he was "specializing in general practice." Down South that phrase means much, from important corporation practise to speaking a word in police court for Aunt Mandy's "wuthless son," who may have got into a scrap, "but he ain't mean no harm, Mas'r Joe."

SAYS NATIONAL GUARD IS WELL EQUIPPED

"The national guard," said Gen. Alfred Leopold Mills, "has never been better equipped or better trained or better officered for service than it is today."

Which may be an important factor in the present situation if the states' militia should be called on for action. General Mills' statement may be taken as fairly representing the situation. In the first place, General Mills knows. He is the head of the division of militia affairs at the war department and as such would have charge of the transfer of the militia to the service of the national government. In the second place, Mills wouldn't say it if it were not true. His specialty is seeing—and saying—the truth.

Mills is the man who reformed West Point. Before his day there as superintendent the cadets were treated like prisoners, fed upon theory and clothed in uniforms that fitted like the skin of a mushroom. If a regiment of West Point cadets had ever charged an enemy, the sound of popping seams would have been heard above the rattle of musketry. They knew a great deal about the manner in which Napoleon was whipped at Waterloo, but they didn't know how Gerontino used to lie behind a rock in order to pot soldiers. Mills changed all that.

Mills came to the academy as superintendent while he was first lieutenant, and therefore still young. That fact did not please any one at all. The elder officers thought it absurd that a "young whiffet"—these cruel words are quoted with exactness—should be given a place that had always been likened in honor to the command of a division. The younger officers were jealous, and said that his appointment was due to favoritism. As a matter of fact, it was due mostly to A. L. Mills, somewhat to Theodore Roosevelt and partially to President McKinley.

WAS BORN IN PRUSSIA

F. W. Lehmann, one of Uncle Sam's mediators at the Niagara Falls peace conference, was born in Prussia, and spent his boyhood days in the fields of his father's farm in Prussia, tending a small flock of sheep. Before the boy was ten years of age the family moved to this country and settled in Cincinnati.

Lehmann ran away from home and tramped several states, specializing in chores as a business, and went to Nebraska. There he tended sheep again, but shepherding for the great shepherds of the West and watching a flock on the Prussian farm were different jobs. Lehmann was not interested in his task, and neglected his charges in the interests of reading. Sterling Morton, father of Paul Morton, took Lehmann away from sheep and put him among books in Tabor college, Iowa, which he quit with honors and a degree in 1873. The rest of Lehmann's story is just one rise after another. In St. Louis they tell you that Lehmann is one of the best lawyers in the country, and then add that his mind is more literary than legal. He is also described as a large, rectangular man, stuffed with exact information. In his person he is large enough to afford room for sufficient facts to qualify him as an unusually able lawyer, besides his literary storage space. He is generally said to be the best-read man in St. Louis, and folks do read in that city. His hobby is the collecting of rare books, and he has probably the best collection of Dickens' first editions in the world. And probably, as he traveled to Niagara Falls, he had a volume of Burns in his pocket, for curiously enough the Scotch poet is the first love of this Prussian-Missourian.

SENATOR LEWIS CALLS A HALT

"It is not a high type of intelligence which mistakes civility for servility."

Thus Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, hored and perhaps made a little indignant by what appears to him in his less cheerful moments to be a persistent habit on the part of underscoring persons to sum up his extremely useful and varied career in a few parrotlike comments upon his dress and his appearance.

"My beard," said the senator, "if you will pardon my reference to an intimate personal matter, has been described as a remarkable work of nature, as a hirsute forest bristling with sparks of fire, and as an ambrosial chest protector. I have been called the Aurora Borealis of Illinois, the Pink-Whiskered Prodigy, the Man Who Made Whiskers a Political Asset, the Pink-Fringed Political Expert. Many a home has been built, many a family thrives upon the steady and apparently rising market value of jeans about my clothes and my manners.

"Now, my dear fellow," concluded the senator, "I am glad to contribute to the prosperity of the country by having my superficial peculiarities furnish material for the struggling efforts of the budding geniuses of journalism; but I have done my share, and it is time that our experimental literary citizens should turn their attention to the gentleman who, so the newspapers tell us, has discovered a method of breeding blue pigs, or to the inventor of the noiseless hammer."

Policeman Is Taken Prisoner by a Lively Cow

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—A big spotted cow with regulation crumpled horns and a determined cast of countenance captured Patrolman Chambers of the Detroit avenue station the other day and bound him so tightly that it required the united efforts of every person living in Neil terrace, West Eighty-ninth street and Detroit avenue, to free him. Then she started off down the street with him hanging to the end of a chain and flopping like the tail of a kite.

At the "moosings" of the cow and the yells of Chambers all the men at the Detroit avenue station rushed out and managed to corral her in Andrew Hartwell's livery stable. As the door slammed on her, Chambers drew a long breath and began to take inventory of the three hundred odd bones in his anatomy.

"Strange," he muttered in a dazed voice. "I was sure some of them must be broken."

The cow, which belongs to W. H. Ford, tired of her pasture and started to hunt a new one early in the morning. She pulled up the stake to which her chain was attached and started. At the Neil terrace the green lawn of the court attracted her and she tarried long enough to get all tangled up in the chain. Her half-strangled groans and "moosings" awoke every one on the terrace and someone called Patrolman Chambers. With soft words he tried to calm the frightened cow, but failed. She caught him between a hoof and herself and proceeded to wind the chain around him. Chambers yelled for help.

The cow then decided to investigate Detroit avenue to the eastward and she took Chambers along. Through lawns and over flower beds she went until the station house was reached at about seven o'clock. The day and night forces were just changing and between the two Chambers' prisoner was subdued.

Buys Meal for a Wayfarer; Lacks Cash to Pay

NEW YORK.—A story is being told of an experience of a wealthy bachelor, a member of a very old New York family, who takes a great deal of interest in charitable work, and who does a lot of investigating on his own account.

Some time ago he was walking on one of the streets of the lowest East side when he was accosted by a wayfarer whose appearance indicated the depths of misfortune and misery. The tramp said he wanted the price of something to eat. The millionaire looked him over.

"I won't give you any money," he said, "but I'll be glad to buy you a good square meal."

The millionaire was very plainly dressed, and the other, after looking him regretfully over, agreed to become his guest. They turned into a restaurant in the vicinity, and the host let the man order what he wanted. He himself ordered a meal and ate.

When it was finished, the millionaire called for his check. When it came, he felt in his pockets. Not a cent did he have. It was an embarrassing moment, but he sought to explain to the waiter.

"None of that stuff goes here; we got too much of that kind of conversation," the attendant informed him. "You pays that check—see!"

The man from uptown called for the manager, and sought to explain the situation, but the manager, too, happened to be from Missouri.

When the millionaire was arguing with the manager, and protesting that he would pay the bill if time was given him, he was surprised by a loud guffaw from the tramp across the table.

"Bo," cried that worthy, leaning over and putting out his hand, "you certainly put one over on me. I never knew anybody could fool me like that. Why, I had no idea you were one of us. I'll pay the check," and he did, producing a sum that was much more than sufficient.

House Lined With Honey Found in Southern City

MOBILE, ALA.—Mobile has a real, sure-enough "honey" residence. It is at the corner of Kentucky and Marine streets, and carpenters say that the walls are practically interlined with honey. Several weeks ago the flooring in the attic of the building, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Gray, and owned by Mrs. Annie B. Fields, began to show unmistakable signs of rotting, although it was far from the ground. Before the floor was taken up, honey began to appear through the boards, and despite efforts to mop the sticky stuff up, it continued to appear.

Mrs. Fields was notified and after being told about the honey she recalled that about five years ago wilds and that it attracted a colony of bees to the place.

When the flowers were removed the bees also disappeared. The honey-makers had discovered an abandoned water spout and through this they gained access to the walls and beneath the weatherboarding they proceeded to make pound after pound of honey.

A carpenter was summoned and on the orders of the owner he cut a hole in the side of the house and attempted to smoke the bees out. For his trouble he was stung several times. Between twenty-five and thirty pounds of honey was found near the hole, and this was removed, but it is believed that several hundred pounds must be in other parts of the walls.

The carpenters are of the opinion that a dozen or more colonies of bees inhabit the Gray home.

THE SUMMER BOARDER

By JUNE GAHAN.

"I do think you might have told me before I started for home," said Estania in a tone of much suppressed disapproval. "I might have gone up to Uncle Walt's, or stayed with Connie. She asked me to, and I was foolish enough to go for home. If you'd only mentioned it some way in your letters, I'd have understood, and you could have rented my room, too, if you liked, to summer boarders."

"Oh, Tan, you always do roll a snowball up until it chases you down hill. Summer boarders! Anybody'd think that we'd started right in business just because we happen to have rented out one bedroom and study."

Estania looked over at her sister reproachfully.

"Chester's own bedroom and study."

"Taa, don't you dare worry mother about this, now. It was my doing. You're all out of touch with the way things go here at home, and you don't understand how every last dollar counts. You trot off to town when you feel like it, and paint in a studio all winter, and give lessons, and go to the opera, and haven't a thing to do but keep Tan Shaplin in a good humor. And Chester's just like you."

"You might leave poor old Ches out of it," interposed Estania, distastefully.

"He's right in it," Vic laughed. "If he had come home this summer and helped as he should have done, we would not have had to insult the family self-respect by taking in ten dollars a week regularly."

"Where's mother?"

"Gone boating with Mr. Pomeroy," very demurely. "He has been just sent, Tan, with mother. He's got a motor boat, a perfectly water-tight, tame one that he keeps down at the club dock, and he takes her out every day for a trip down the bay."

"Mother?" with raised eyebrows.

"Dear, no—the boat; but mother does go often and so do I. He's a friend of the Barclays and wanted to be near them for the summer. We think it's Margaret so far."

Estania turned with her traveling cloak and suitcase, almost colliding at the head of the staircase with a young man who was hurrying down three steps at a time. He was tall and dark, thoroughly shabby.

"Pardon me. Awfully clumsy and unlucky I am, anyway. Say, Vic, your mother wants her gray veil to tie around her hair—and her coat."

He stood out on the broad veranda waiting while Vic hunted for the things.

Estania could not explain her feelings. Somehow the summer boarder grew to represent to her all the fallen fortunes of the little home, and she resented his very existence. If Chester had been there, it could never have happened. But Chester was one of the smooth-faced lieutenants facing his first battle smoke on one of the big gray ships in the Gulf.

Then came a fateful day. Mr. Pomeroy had gone for a shore tramp with Vic. Mrs. Chaplin was taking a nap. It was a golden day out of doors, and Tan had decided to paint a water color of the garden. She wanted a certain camp stool that Vic had handed over with anything else he wanted, to the summer boarder. Estania ventured into his room to recover her property.

Inside the door she stopped. Flinging her on the bureau was a very good photograph of herself, one that she had sent to Chester just before his sailing south. Yet it confronted her now, and it was inscribed on Bruce Pomeroy's dresser.

She went down quietly without the camp stool, and waited determinedly for the return of Mr. Pomeroy. He came with Vic along the bench, strolling leisurely. Vic ran into the house to help with dinner, and Bruce threw himself down on the grass in front of the angry goddess.

He heard her in silence, merely nodding assent to every accusation she made. Yes, he had known Chester very well indeed; chums at Annapolis. He himself had given up the navy when his father had died, and now subsisted most comfortably on an income derived from shoe manufacture.

"Awfully unpoetic, isn't it?" he smiled at this confession.

"And you gained possession of my picture from Ches?"

"I did," he acquiesced cordially. "I saw it when he was packing, and it interested me. Then I knew Peggie Barclay and she coaxed your blessed mother into taking pity on a lone bachelor, and letting me stay here for the summer. I had an idea at that time, you know, that you'd come home, and I'd see you."

Slowly Estania's dignity began to ebb away. She stared out at a vibrant sea gull that swept in narrowing circles over the little boat dock below them.

"I'm afraid I've been a perfect cat," she said slowly. "I had no idea that you were a chum of Chester's."

"I'm going to be more than that," Bruce answered, rather soberly. "I'm going to be his brother-in-law. Vic just promised me that joy."

The Slow Hired Man.

"I have heard that a growing pumpkin or melon vine will in a few days reach a pall of water left near it," said the farmer's wife, at the evening lamp.

"Well, my hired man will do the same thing," replied the farmer; "but it will take him at least that long to do it."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By O. E. SELLERS, Director of Evening Department The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

LESSON FOR JUNE 21

THE GREAT REFUSAL.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-18. GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Luke 16:13. (Read also entire story.)

The story of this rich young ruler is one of the ministry of our Lord that has made an indelible impression throughout every succeeding generation. This is so because it is so vital, vibrant and vivid a revelation of our every-day experience. The lesson naturally divides itself into two sections. Read carefully the parallel accounts; Matt. 19:16-20 and Luke 18:18-30.

Man of Courage.

1. An Eager Young Man, vv. 17-22. This man, of an interesting nature. Much may be said in his favor: (1) He was young (Matt. 19:22); (2) He was in earnest, "came running" (v. 17); (3) He was educated, "a lawyer," Luke 18:18; (4) He was rich, Mark 10:22; (5) He was loved by Jesus, Mark 10:21. That he had lived a clean life is revealed by the answers he made to Jesus. Moreover he must have been a man of some courage, belonging as he did to the ruling class, the Pharisees, yet he came running into the presence of Jesus and cast himself at his feet. We need not recall that this class was at this time definitely hostile to Christ, yet this young man dared to speak the conviction of his heart in this public way by calling Jesus, "good." We feel that he was an honest seeker after life. His question reveals the unrest of the human heart. It matters not what men may possess of wealth or position, these things do not bring heart rest. Great moral courage, noble aspirations and benevolence never will save nor fully satisfy the human soul. Man does not obtain life by doing. Gal. 2:16. Life is a gift. Rom. 6:23. We must not misunderstand the reply of Jesus (v. 18). Jesus did not deny being good. John 8:46; 14:30; 8:29, but he saw that this young man was filled with the idea of his own goodness. To say that Jesus was good was practically to say he was God, and this the young man did not mean. Jesus sought to reveal to him his endless use of words. Jesus undoubtedly here lays claim to deity and subsequently he said, (v. 21) "Follow me," i. e., for this man to yield his life actually to the control of God.

Jesus began where the young man lived, within the law, the spirit of which is "do and thou shalt live"; but he quickly revealed to this self-confident one that though he professed "all these things have I observed," yet he was mistaken and tremendously self-deceived. So far as he went he made a correct interpretation of his own need but the skillful teacher revealed to him his one great lack. His life was not really controlled by God and at once Jesus created an opportunity for him to yield himself to a life of wholehearted service. He touched the vital spot, for the supreme test in the way of allowing God to rule was to set aside the rule of wealth, position, and selfishness.

Last week we were taught to "make friends by means of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when it shall fail they may receive you into the eternal tabernacles." This is exactly what Christ told this young man to do. "Sell . . . give to the poor." By thus using he would store up treasure in heaven. That he could not stand the test is evident from v. 22. However, beyond this simple record we can only speculate. We trust, however, that his sorrow may have been that which "worketh repentance," II Cor. 7:10. This much is certain: Jesus presented to him his greatest opportunity. Two paths were opened before him, one straight and narrow, and one broad and easy to follow. Which did he take? His one lack may have been fatal.

Perils of Riches.

II. The Master's Exhortation, vv. 23-31. As a great teacher and philosopher Jesus took this occasion to point out the perils of riches. Nearly every man is willing to run the risk. We have, however, but to look about us to see illustration after illustration of the truth of these words. "How hardly!"—increased wealth, decreased piety. "How hardly!"—men seek to tone down this picture, but have no right so to do. The only safety is found in the words of verse 27, "with God all things are possible." The most severe test possible to be given to a man's religious experience is for him to be prospered in wealth or position. The rich young ruler is an evidence of the fact that such a godless life is a restless one.

Notwithstanding his possessions, his refinement, the privileges of his position and a life so cleanly lived as to leave no vulgar moral stain, yet he exclaimed: "What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" It was easier for the proverbial camel to have entered the city gate (or a literal needle's eye as you prefer) than for this young man to yield to God the control of his life. Every life is under control. A godless life is a self-controlled life. As men came to Jesus he saw perfectly their individual needs; their peculiar anxiety.

The disciples were amazed at the master's words and thought if a rich man cannot be saved there is hope for none. Such is not the meaning. This is revealed in the reply to Peter's question. Men are saved irrespective of position or of possessions for God loves them all. Those who turn the control of their lives over to his keeping, those who, no matter what their condition or position in life, follow him, leaving all, or braving all as the case may be, will have their reward here in this life and in the world to come, eternal life.

SINGS PRAISE OF "BIGNESS"

Writer in Leslie's Weekly Sees Good in Everything That Has Quality of Size.

Big! It is said that the soil that produces big crops is found where big men abound. After all bigness is something of which every one is proud. California boasts of its big trees, Oregon and Washington of their big apples, Texas of its big territory, Oklahoma of its big oil wells, Colorado of its big mines, New England of its big mills, Alabama of its big iron deposits, Pennsylvania of its big steel industry and New York of its big banks. Everywhere bigness is the boast of civilization. Nations vie with each other to command the biggest part of the world's trade. In this great struggle for commercial supremacy the United States, during the past decade, has been among the foremost because of its big men in the industrial, the railway and professional fields. The product of this bigness of men has been a big country with big wages. Let us stop caviling and finding fault. Let us put end to hushing and smushing, and give the widest opportunity for individual effort. Encourage bigness of the factory and the pay envelope alike. Give big brains a chance, whether in bank, counting room or workshop. Bigness pays.—Leslie's Weekly.

Man's Life Outlays.

An eccentric personage has just died in a town in the west of France at the age of seventy-seven. When he was eighteen years of age he began to keep a book of personal expenses. For 52 years he jotted down every item.

During this period he smoked 628,713 cigars. Of this number 43,692 were presented to him by friends. For the remaining 585,021 he spent the sum of $2,040.

He had bought 86 pairs of trousers, which cost him $392; 75 jackets and waistcoats for $160, and 62 pairs of shoes for $66. He used 300 shirts and 354 collars, for which he paid $253. His omnibus and tram fares came to $52. In 15 years he drank 23,875 books and 40,303 small glasses of liquor, and spent on them $1,104, plus $249 in tips.—Glasgow Evening News.

In Difficulty.

A newly-married young woman had a gas cooker fixed in her kitchen. The gas company sent her a card of rules, with instructions to study them well, and what she couldn't understand they would explain to her. Imagine the clerk's surprise the next morning when he read the following note:

"Dear Sir—I can understand all the rules except the one at the bottom of the card—'See other side.' It's impossible to see the other side; the man has fixed it against the wall."

His own boots were rather dirty, so he thought there was no harm in putting on the parson's, when he accordingly did, and turned off into the village pub. for a big "reviver." He had not gone very far when whom did he meet but the vicar, who said: "I sent my boots down for repairs, William. Are you not finished with them yet?"

"Wey, mistor," answered Bill, calmly, "they're not mended yit, but they're on the road."

The absurd desire of the Wilson Administration to "assist" the farmers and the banks with Uncle Sam's cash is merely the longings of populism and socialism.

A party of Rowan County teachers will leave Morehead on Monday June 29th, for a trip to Niagara Falls, this recognition and reward being because of their service in the moonlight schools which they conducted so successfully and with such heroism and self-sacrifice. The trip will be given through the courtesy of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, and is a well deserved recognition of the most faithful and unselfish body of teachers in the world.—The Mountaineer.

The Rev. Dr. John W. Butler, head of the Methodist Episcopal Mission with headquarters in Mexico City, and branches throughout that country, who recently returned to the United States, adds his testimony to that of other intelligent observers, in the statement that it is useless to talk about popular elections and a government of the people in Mexico while 80 per cent. of the population remain illiterate. Schools are the chief remedy, he says. It would be a great undertaking for the United States to regenerate that country, but peace with liberty is hardly probable in any other way. Mexico has immense resources, which have been largely given away to foreigners for development. Under good laws and wise government the country would move forward rapidly.

MANY NEW SENATORS TO BE ELECTED.

Thirty-three United States Senators, whose terms will expire on March 3 next, are to be elected this year by direct vote of the people in the first general test of the seventeenth amendment to the Constitution. If the people do not vote in larger number than in some recent elections, a considerable number of Senators will be elected by a minority of voters. Most of the Republicans whose terms expire are candidates to succeed themselves. Root of New York, Burton of Ohio, and Gallinger of New Hampshire may retire. Senator Crawford of South Dakota was defeated in the recent primary election for nomination by Representative Charles H. Burke who is represented as a strong stand-patter. Of the Democrats whose terms expire, all except Senator Thornton of Louisiana are candidates to succeed themselves. In the Senatorial primary in Alabama April 6, Representative Oscar Underwood defeated Representative Hobson by a large majority.

Berea College is to have another dormitory, known as Kentucky Hall, which will cost $25,000. At the close of the exercises in honor of the birthday of D. K. Pearson, Berea's most generous donor, the 1200 students of the college inaugurated a movement to place a new dormitory on the grounds. Already $10,000 of the required sum has been pledged, and it is expected that the remainder will be raised before the commencement exercises in June.

Close observation of 600 school boys through a period of seven years to discover the effects of the tobacco habit demonstrated by Supt. Davis of Menominee, Mich., that the non-smokers averaged from two to ten per cent. higher in scholarship and were at still greater advantage in the athletics of school. Idleness and poor conditions of home life were the almost invariable accompaniments of all cases of smoking and of all cases of failure which he observed.

ORGANIZERS MAY TAKE NOTE FROM THE CHAUTAUQUA

Scores of Details Must Be Arranged Before Redpath Companies Visit Town.

Various Forms of Advertising Used In Boosting Seven Day Program Here.

That the Chautauqua, now in operation in thousands of progressive American cities, is one of the most marvelously organized systems under the sun is evidenced by a look at the complicated program of details that must be carried out before canvas is folded on the last day of a seven day series of entertainments.

The Chautauqua moves from town to town, from city to city and from state to state without mishap, friction or noise. To follow the Redpath Chautauquas from the time winter quarters are abandoned until the season closes on the lakes would furnish new ideas even to some of the greatest master organizers. No army, though backed by a government, ever moved with more graceful ease.

After the Chautauqua circuit has been arranged a force of agents go forth with various assignments to perform and they are kept busy until the last stand of the season. Some look after the organization of local committees, others arrange a dozen forms of advertising, still others arrange the details of the seven day programs, and for the rest of the working force there are left such tasks as arranging for grounds, tents, billposting, newspaper advertising and ticket sales.

The talent for these programs is secured many months in advance in order that the Chautauqua patrons may be supplied with well trained artists.

And then as time for the Chautauqua approaches there appears in each city the "twenty-eight day man," who lays out a local advertising campaign by use of newspapers, billboards, awning dates, window cards, color postcards, souvenir programs and other novelties.

When the "nine day man" arrives he looks over the grounds provided by the local committee and makes it a point to have the premises in good condition throughout Chautauqua week. He secures permission to place streamers across the street from pole to pole, and in hundreds of windows he places small paper pennants advertising the coming event.

In many cases the local committee, if full of enthusiasm, plans an automobile parade for Chautauqua boosters, and nearby towns are informed that the Chautauqua is not far off. Arrangements are made for electric lights, baggage and piano, and a score of other details are worked out by the busy "nine day man."

With the arrival of the Chautauqua superintendent the "nine day man" moves on to his next town and proceeds to advertise for the program that is to begin in exactly nine days. This nine day stay in each place necessitates a jump from town No. 1 to town No. 10 and requires the services of nine of these men during the Chautauqua season.

The superintendent, who is accompanied by the tent crew of four college men, arrives two days before the Chautauqua opens, and in addition to his duties as manager he looks after the distribution of opening day tags, which are placed on doorknobs. He also has charge of a number of other forms of advertising.

All this is incidental and preparatory to the Chautauqua proper, and not until the big tent, 90 by 130, is pitched in a central location do the groups of Chautauqua talent appear for their entertainments. One day's talent appears in a town and then moves forward to the next stand. The second day's talent follows suit, and likewise with the other five days of the program.

And when Chautauqua week is over and the crews have packed their equipment they move on to the next location, where a similar program is carried out.

The whole plan, presenting many complications, is worked out to a speedy, and irregularities are kept at a minimum.

Homecoming Week.

Why not make Chautauqua week a homecoming event? Invite your relatives and friends to visit you during the Redpath Chautauqua. Ask them to join you in the enjoyment of seven big days of inspiration, fellowship, popular education and entertainment. Make the big tent your headquarters during the Chautauqua homecoming.

Wonderful Entertainment. Charlotte (N. C.) Observer: "The fact that the entertainment is in a tent will not prejudice you against the Chautauqua if you go just one time. For the price of admission the entertainment is remarkable."

Record June prices prevail for June hams, scarcity being the price-making factor. Chicago last week had the smallest run within a year. A June trade on spring hams crowding the $10 notch is a decided novelty. The wool market continues buoyant. In Montana the staple wools are on a 20c basis with average clips at 18 to 18½.

BANK CLOSING DOORS.

The Citizens' Bank and Trust Company, of Ashland, closed its doors after an examination by State Bank Examiner J. B. Chennault. The bank has a capital stock of $200,000, a surplus of $20,000, deposits of $400,000 and loans of $500,000. Alleged bad loans in the South is said to be the cause of the bank's trouble.

Public Sale

We will sell at Public Auction at 2 p. m., Saturday June 20th, the Suburban home of Mr. D. A. Emmitt, located on the Maysville and Germantown turnpike just outside the city limits. This is a nice two story frame house of seven rooms with halls, bath and water in the house, also small house on corner of lot that rents to good advantage, together with about two acres of land. There is a variety of fruit of all kinds on this place. A splendid place for chicken raising and truck gardening. Mr. Emmitt has bought a farm and moved his family to it, and has decided to sell this very desirable home. With the extension of the street car line in the West End, and the many improvements that are going on in this section of our city, we think we can see a fine opportunity for an investment in this West End property. This home will be sold on easy terms which will be announced on day of sale. Here is your chance to buy a nice home at your own price.

WORLD LAUGHS

At President Wilson's Policy Declares Former Governor Wilson of Kentucky

Louisville.—Former Governor A. B. Wilson fired the first broadside in his campaign for the Republican senatorial nomination by issuing a statement in which he declares that the whole world is laughing at Woodrow Wilson's Administration.

The statement throughout is an attack upon the Wilson policies. Much of it is devoted to the tariff, which, he declares, has increased the cost of living, at the same time decreasing the ability of the taxpayer to meet the living cost. The Administration has brought about a ruinous business depression, in his opinion.

Concerning the Democratic state administration, Governor Wilson speaks in even harsher terms. He characterizes the writer calls upon "all Progressives the insurance war in this State as a 'pitiable mess.'"

REBUILDING SALE STARTS SATURDAY, JUNE 20th, 1914

The one great object of this sale is to dispose of all goods on hand as we do not want to move a single piece of merchandise; therefore, we will demonstrate to the public our value giving by creating the bargain feast which will long be remembered by the thousands of people of Maysville who already appreciate our way of merchandising, and will follow us to our new store. Don't forget that the sale includes all heavy as well as medium goods. We appreciate the fact that you are a judge of merchandise, and for that reason we ask you to read our prices and then come to the sale, expecting the grandest bargains you ever bought, and we guarantee you'll not go away disappointed.

It is our object to demonstrate in this sale the power of price making and value giving, as we want the public to fully realize that we are not closing out or going out of business, but on the contrary we are compelled to double our capacity in order to take care of our many new, as well as old customers. When we say removal sale we mean it; the Merz reputation is such that we will not permit it to be misunderstood. This sale will consist of merchandise that is recognized as the highest standard goods.

RIVER NEWS.

After being laid up at Cincinnati for a re-hauling and thorough complete repairs the old Courier is back on the Cincinnati-Maysville line once more. She has been fixed up in dandy shape and looks like a new boat. But there is just one thing that mars the whole works. They have taken off her old whistle that the citizens of this city and county have heard, known and rejoiced in for years. This whistle, originally was on the St. Lawrence, that for years ran between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, thus making it doubly dear to us. In the place of this old friend they have substituted a whistle of foreign blast and alien tone. We are sad. Give us back our old whistle. Please give us back our old whistle!

LOST YESTERDAY

Blue Sox Took Game By Score of 7 to 3—Poor Fielding and Careless Base Running Lost Game.

The Maysville team had a very bad day yesterday and apparently had lost the life and pepper that they have possessed for the past few days, for they allowed the Huntington Blue Sox to take a game by the score of 7 to 3, which really should have gone to Maysville.

Goth started the game but was replaced by Crowe in the sixth after six runs and seven hits had been made off his delivery and the errors of his fellow players.

Higley for the Blue Sox let the Cubs down with six hits.

RIGHT OFF THE BAT.

Huntington again this afternoon. Game called at 3:15 o'clock.

Huntington pulled off a triple play in the fourth when the Burley Boys ran wild and heedlessly on the bases. This is the first triple play ever made on the local diamond.

Charles Sturr, President of the Park (K.V.) team, Ohio State League, Thursday signed Red Munson, Cincinnati boy, to manage the club. Munson will play first base. He was secured from Portsmouth.

The Appalachian league is said to be on the verge of collapse. Middleboro, Ky., withdrew and financial losses in practically every city of the circuit discouraged the club owners. This would be a good chance for the local management to do a little scouting around and get a good first baseman and a pitcher or two.

THE BASEBALL WAR CONTINUES.

The first legal step to prevent Armando Marsans and Dave Davenport from playing with the St. Louis Federal league ball team or any other team than the Cincinnati Reds will be taken Thursday afternoon in St. Louis. The Cincinnati club will file suit in the United States court in that city, asking for an injunction restraining the ball players from further participating in Federal league games.

MEXICAN SITUATION GRAVE—MEDIATION COMPLETE FAILURE.

Washington, June 18.—Officials of the Washington Government tonight characterized the Mexican situation as extremely delicate. This comment referred particularly to the mediation conference, which will be resumed tomorrow at Niagara Falls, but it also applied to the conditions in Northern Mexico growing out of the action of General Villa in insisting that he should have complete military control in the campaign against General Huerta.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by Local Applications, as they do not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When the tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound in your ears, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation is taken out and the tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; unless cases of deafness are cured by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Mr. L. T. Anderson and sister, Miss Grace Anderson, are attending the Dayton, Ohio, Horse Show, and will later attend the Forest City Horse Show at Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Louisa Long of Kansas City, also has her string of thoroughbreds at both shows.

Mrs. Charles Shumaker was unfortunate in having a bad accident happen to a valuable horse belonging to the family while she was driving it to church Sunday. In coming down the Hill City Pike the horse broke through a plank in a small wooden bridge and severely hurt his leg. Fortunately the animal escaped without breaking the limb.

PAIGE

Model Chevrolet "34"—Electric lighting and starting—$1275
Model Buick "25"—6-passenger—Electric lighting and starting—$975

MAYBE it is an old fashioned idea this notion of putting all the value possible into the car itself—and as little as possible into overhead expense—

But it has given the Paige a positively dominant position among cars of medium price—

Ample capital for operating purposes—no bonded indebtedness—no excessive capitalization—no heavy overhead of any kind to be paid for.

Just a full dollar of car value for every dollar of the selling price.

Is it any wonder that the Paige is going to be oversold again this year in spite of increased production?
